STOCKS-The stock market, in comparison STOCKS—The stock market, in comparison with the preceding days of the week, was only moderately active. The opening was strong and active, while the gains over last evening ranged in the general list from $40 per cent. New England showed a gain of $4 per cent. The market in early dealings was active but feverish and irregular. The usual undertone of strength, however, soon became noticeable, and noon prices were generally a fraction above the opening figure. There was some hesitation later, and the market quieted down, remaining barely firm until the close, which was generally steady.

Cattle. The cattle market is flat and there is noth ing doing. It would require very choice corn-fed cattle to bring 4c. Fair to good corn-fed steers would not bring over $3,50%.

corn led steers would not oring over $3,30%.

5.75. Commission men generally are advising shippers to keep their cattle at home unless they are willing to sell very low. As bad as the market is it is no worse than Chicago, and if anything it is better, as no one could take cattle from here to Chicago and get rid of them at the prices.

Hogs. The receipts of hogs were very liberal for a Saturday's market. The opening was about steady with vesterday's prices, and the market active. The market closed a little weak.

Sheep. There were a few on the market but none sold, Receipts.

Chicago Mail: Except that Crossus in corsets, the Chillian donna we read about, Mrs. Meredith, of Cambridge City, is the cattle queen of the world. She is now in this city and I lifted my hat to her vesterday. Mrs. M. is the widow of General Meredith. General Meredith, when he was alive, was of the pioneer tipe cattle breeders in this country. He fine cattle breeders in this country. He became rich as the craze for priced, imported snorthorns grew, until in the '60s and the early '70s he was worth probably $500,000. He had the Airdries, and paid out $10,000 as readily for a buil that happened to be after his own heart s more conservative men paid out money for good lands with houses on them. But the general went broke when the craze subsided. His son failed after him, but the widow, with all her style and grace, had a better bead for business than either the husbandor son. She took the herds that were left and managed them, and where both men had failed, she suc-

General Meredith used to own $10,000 bulls and ran to $5,000 calves. His handsome widow has got over that folly. general was quixotic from the standpoint of cattle men. The widow is practical. The modern idea in cattle raising is to raise a herd and to breed it up until it has certain distinctive characteristics—of fine beef, for instance, or of fine rich milk, or of great beauty. Mrs. Meredith would be happy if she could sell twenty calves a year for $250 a piece. The general was never satisfied unless he could have a sale once in two years, and could get $5,000 or $10,000 for his cows and bulls. Cattle men now are gratified if they can take their customers out into their fields general was quixotic from the standpoint take their customers out into their fields and show them a herd of cattle each one of which is so much alike every other one of which is so much alike every other one that there is no distinguishing them. This is the latter-day theory; the general's was the old-fushioned. Men and women are getting rich now breeding fine animals. All the old cattle lords who held the general's views went broke in 1875. #### WAS SHE SHOT FOR A SPY?

The Mysterious Murder of a Beautiful Young Lady.

A Supposed Hospital Nurse Found Lifeless in the Room With a Horrible Wound in Her Breast.

When Sherman was playing hide and seek with the army of General Joe Johnston, on the way from Chattanooga, a woman of ravishing beauty made her appearance in Atlanta. Where she came from no one knew; of her people-he never spoke; but it was surmised by by some of the ladies who had gotten near her that she bore some secret sorrow, perhaps the sacrifice of a loved one on the bloody fields of Virginia, says the Atlanta Constitution.

Day by day train loads of wounded confederates reached Atlanta from the front. The ladies of the city engaged in hospital work with a zeal worthy the sisters and wives of brave men. Zealous as all were in this work Miss Emma, which was the only name by which she was generally known, became noted be cause of her endurance and tidelity. she would pass from ward to ward the dying men would turn ther eyes smilingly toward her. She was, indeed, the angel of the hospital.

Notwithstanding all this, the eye of suspicion fell upon her. Was she a spy? The question would have been laughed at by most people, and yet there were those who detected in her manner some-thing they did not like. But this suspicion was hushed by the uniformly phil-anthropic work in which Miss Emma was engaged. At last Sherman's lines were drawn around the city, and the people began to experience all the horrors of a siege. The sick and the dying were multiplied, and the efforts of noble women to relieve them became ex-hausted. Miss Emma grew pale with excessive work. Rest she declined to take while a wound was to be bandaged or a dying man longed for kind words.

The sound of revelry is often heard amid the din of battle. Even when the people were driven into their bomb-proofs they sang and danced, for they recognized the philosophy of driving grief away by pleasure. Balls, somewhat impromptu, it is true, were given and the ladies looked more charming in their confederate toilets than they could looked in silks. The officers were always the beaux of such occasions, for beauty is attracted by bravery. To these gatherings Miss Emma never went but there came a time when she was pressed to go. The colonel of a gallant infantry regiment had invited her to a bomb proof ball. Miss Emma was urged to go, as a relief from the pressing hospital work which was slowly killing her. She at last consented and was soon in the whirl of many dancers.

The kind lady with whom Miss Emma lodged did not awake until the sun was an hour high next day. She had not heard Miss Emma enter, but no dream of harm entered her mind. She determ-ined not to disturb the poor hady, but let her sleep on, for did not her faithfu service entitle her to rest?

There were excited crowds upon the Orderlies on horseback dashed streets. to and fro. The roar of Snerman's artillery was becoming more and more terri-tic. There was something in the air which announced that a crisis was imminent. But still the lady slept! The hour was growing late, and the excitement of the people outside was incresing A knock at Miss Emma's door brought no answer. When the door was burst open a singular sight was presented. Reclining upon the sofa Miss Emma laid, as if in peaceful sleep. She was dressed in white, with a yellow belt around her waist and a blue cape thrown carelessly across her shoulder, Upon the linger of one hand was an elegant diamond ring. The other arm snowy in its whiteness, was thrown above her head. She presented a beautiful picture. She did not move upon the entrance of her friend. To the touch she was cold. If she breathed at all it was so quietly that death could not still it more. cape was lifted, when a horrible wound in the breast was disclosed. It appeared as if a whole load of bird shot had been lodged in her bosom.

Poor Emma was dead-murdered! Bu by whom?
The window overlooking the garden was raised. The footprints of several men were visible, and the box upon which they stood, in order to reach the window, was still in place. It was evi-dent that after the poor girl had met her death her body was quietly carried back passed through the window and the re mains arranged upon the sofa with an eve to every detail which might have effect. Not an article of jewelry was missing. Everything was in place.

But Sherman's men were entering the city. The confederates were retreating.

Confusion reigned supreme. In the general stampede which followed lesser sen sations were forgotten. When at last the smoke of battle had cleared away and people returned to rebuild their fortunes, the fate of the murdered woman was recalled, and three theories were maintained. One was that during the ball a shrapnel shell had penetrated the retreat, and, exploding, killed Miss Emma. The second was that on her way home she had been mur dered by her escort. The third was that she was a federal spy; that she was taxed with her identity, and that she had all along been furnishing Sherman with im-portant information. Enranged by her treachery, the men sentenced her to death and executed the sentence. Her body was then hurriedly returned to the room from which she had emerged the evening before joyous and beautiful

But it was too late to investigate. After awhile the whole matter was forgotten. and even now her grave in Oakland i unknown.

Recovery of Stolen Money Under

SAW IT IN A DREAM.

Peculiar Circumstances. Philadelphia Letter in New York Times: About three weeks ago $3,897, the savings of a life-time, was stolen from Charles Caughlin, of No. 1240 North Twenty-sixth street. Mr. Caughlin, who is over seventy years old, and his wife, wife's brother, who is also very old, and a hired man, are the only occupants of house. Mr. Caughlin kept the money, house. Mr. Caughlin kept the monst greenbacks, in a large pocketbook, which was concealed in an old chest, and both his wife and himself insist that no one about the house or ineighborhood knew of its being there. The aged couple did not for a moment entertain a suspicion of any one who belongs about the house nor of any of their neighbors or relatives. The wife of Edward Caughlin, a son of the septagenarian, who hyes on Laney street, immediately back of his father's residence, rushed into the old homestead yesterday and informed her mother in law that she had a dream the night before, in which she saw the missing money concealed in the hay-loft Old Mrs. Caughlin ridiculed the idea that a dream could furnish a clue to the stolen wealth, but her daughter-in-law at once proceeded to the loft, and soon returned with $2,600 of the money tied up in a handkerchief. The gold and $1,100 of the greenbacks and two gold rings, with the pocketbook, are still missing.

Mrs. Caughlin, sr., reports that the money, wrapped in a handkerchief, was found behind one of the rafters in the hay loft. She subsequently made a more thorough.

more of the money, and Mr. Caughlin has given up all hope of ever seeing the $1,297, which, with the rings and pocketbook, the thief forgot to place in the hankerchief. It was reported that a fortune teller had directed Mr. Caughlin to where the recovered money was found, but there is no truth in that version. He visited a for-tune teller, but all she told him was that the stolen money was in the block in which he lived. This he did not breathe, even to his wife, and had nothing to do with the recovery of the $2,600. The old gentleman does not even now suspect any particular person of committing the robbery and has no theory as to how it was perpetrated. 'I kept the money in the house, as I expected to use it soon. he said to-day to a reporter, everybody was as honest as they should be if would be just as safe here as in a bank. It would not have been any safer in some banks than it was in the chest." A child was recently born at the Emer gency Hospital, New York City, without a mouth. The physicians made an incision, cutting through the flesh and a tough membrane which connected the upper and lower jaws. Plugs of pressed cotton were then put between the jaw bones to prevent them from uniting in healing. The appearance of the mouth is now quite natural. There will be but little lip, and the mouth when closed will look like a heavy sear. It is thought that the palate and tongue will develop and be nearly normal by the time the child is full grown, and an effort will be made to turn the flesh so that the lips will appear
